Haiku Helen Press. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Billy Stampone (illustrator). Paperback. 408 pages. Dimensions: 8.5in. x 5.5in. x 0.9in. Sweet Sound of Bird Song is the 4th in a series of novels by Anne Wilensky. The first half of book, Summer 2010 is a continuation of her life in Tucson with her husband Bill and their pets. Other than the first 3 chapters which describe their relocation from NYC to Tucson 20 years earlier, which is dramatic, Anne and Bill are now happily settled in. That half of book is their summer and fall of 2010, although there are day to day ups and downs, the experience of reading it is like lying next to a cat who is purring. The second half of book Driving Lessons is a total departure. It begins only a few months later, but Anne is suddenly and surprisingly on her own. The first order of business is learning how to drive. Her husband's best friend Jim is teaching her to drive the stick shift on the truck. They start right away. Jim has been driving forever and is a great driver, he thinks it will be easy to teach Anne to drive. Anne's dad was the greatest teacher in the world, he taught her to ice skate, play tennis, everything. Learning from him was a cinch. Both Jim and Anne entered into the enterprise with high hopes. But Jim has never taught anyone before. He didn't bother showing Anne where the brake was and the first thing which happened is she almost crashed into her Mustang in her driveway. She didn't know how to steer and when she backed up she kept going all the way into neighbor's front yard. A month later Anne emails her friend: My Higher Self says, Jim is the most...
